Ex-justice wants to breed time-conscious Filipinos

By Blanche S. Rivera

THERE ARE MOMENTS THAT CHANGE A LIFE, say those who have grown old and wise.

As a happily retired man who was once a member of the country's highest court recalled one Christmas 50 years ago, his face tells the story of those moments in his life.

Esperon overrules probe panel

By Dona Z. Pazzibugan

ARMED FORCES CHIEF of Staff Gen. Hermogenes Esperon Jr. has overruled the recommendation of a military panel to dismiss mutiny charges against 38 officers implicated in the Feb. 24 coup attempt and ordered Maj. Gen. Renato Miranda, Brig. Gen. Danilo Lim and 28 others to face a court-martial.

Esperon told a news conference that he was sending a strong message that "adventurism" would no longer be tolerated within the military, some of whose members had been behind more than a dozen coup plots since the overthrow of the dictator Ferdinand Marcos in 1986.

"We're very serious, that's why we're trying them by court-martial," Esperon said. "The purpose ... is to prove if evidence will hold."

RP-US free trade pact in July, says GMA

By Philip C. Tubeza

SINGAPORE (VIA PLDT)—WITH the lapsed Bell Trade Act that promoted "free trade" between the Philippines and the United States shortly after World War II a distant memory, President Macapagal-Arroyo on Sunday said she wanted the Philippines to forge a free trade agreement with the United States by July next year.

The President made the announcement even as the controversy over a proposed economic agreement between Japan and the Philippines remained unresolved.

Speaking to reporters while en route to Singapore after attending the 14th Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation (Apec) summit in Hanoi, Ms Arroyo said she had asked business leaders led by shipping magnate Doris Magsaysay Ho to draft a proposed FTA after President George W. Bush agreed to the idea.

"In the past, both US trade and other officials and the US business community were not very keen on a trade agreement with the Philippines. But when I took it up with President Bush this time, he said yes immediately," Ms Arroyo said.

It was Ms Arroyo who brought the topic up with Bush during a 10-minute "pull aside" meeting on the sidelines of the Apec summit, according to Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye.

"The matter of a trade agreement with the US was mentioned and President Gloria said that (the Department of Trade and Industry) is now working on a complete package to be submitted the

RP gains support on Milk Code stand

By Christian V. Esguerra

EXPRESSIONS OF SUPPORT from the United States, Canada, New Zealand and the United Kingdom have poured in in the wake of the "blackmail" of the Philippine government by American businessmen over the country's rules regulating the marketing of infant milk formula.

"Do not let yourself be bullied by these outrageously inhumane beings—they are not supported by the citizens of their countries," a mother from the United States wrote in an Internet-based "petition of solidarity" started by the global advocacy group Baby Milk Action.

"I admire the Philippines [for] taking this strong action to protect infants," wrote another mother from Canada. "Infant health should always take precedence over corporate interests."

Similar messages continue to fill the online Baby Milk Action petition, all attacking the Chamber of Commerce of the United States of America.

Mothers and breast milk advocates were outraged by the letter of Thomas Donahue, chamber president and chief executive officer, warning President Macapagal-Arroyo on the government's position against infant formulas.

"It has been brought to my attention that a recent regulatory decision by an agency of your government would have unintended negative consequences for investors' confidence in the predictability of business law in the Philippines," Donahue said in the letter dated Aug. 11.

Donahue was referring to the revised implementing rules and regulations (IRR) of Executive Order No. 51, or the Milk Code, which limits the marketing of infant formulas and requires companies to put labels on their products warning of possible health hazards.

He said the chamber was par-

NBI seizes 7 tons of flattened ₱1 coins

By Marjorie C. Ortiz

SMUGGLERS HAVE DEVISED AN ingenious way of sneaking tons of nickel-rich Philippine coins out of the country.

Instead of illegally exporting the coins in their original form, the syndicate of smugglers flattens the currency using a special machine press to avoid detection, the National Bureau of Investigation said yesterday.

The NBI made the discovery last week after seizing close to seven tons of flattened one-peso coins in raids in the cities of Taguig and Parañaque.

The flattened coins, which the suspects allegedly bought for P380 per kilo, were intended to be smuggled into China to be used in the manufacture of computer parts and cell phones, according to Ruel Lasala, chief of the NBI National Capital Region (NCR) Office.

Deadly play by a child rebel

By DJ Yap

AT THE AGE OF 9, JIM SPENT his afternoons playing "piko" (hopscotch). But unlike ordinary kids, he had other things on his mind—like spying on a military camp a stone's throw away from his house.

It was mostly fun and games for the young boy, who was recruited to the communist New People's Army by family members. He would have continued being an informant but for one unfortunate incident when he turned 10.

As he put it, he "caused" the deaths of a cousin and a number of soldiers after an Army camp in his hometown in Mindanao was attacked by NPA guerrillas, who had received a tip from Jim about their movements and position.

"Even now, I can remember what happened vividly. It often crosses my mind that I was responsible for their deaths," Jim, now 21, said in Filipino.

He was one of the speakers at yesterday's Peace Tech, a regional dialogue via teleconference between youths at St. Paul University in Quezon City and their counterparts at the University of South Eastern Philippines in Davao City.

Rights probe team to appeal to Canada

CANDLES were lit during the wake for Bishop Ramento of the Aglipayan Church whose killing, leftist activists suspect, was part of a government campaign to intimidate the Left.

BAGUIO CITY—Members of a Canadian human rights fact-finding mission said they would call on the Canadian government to express concern over the spate of political killings in the Philippines.

In a press forum on Monday, lawyer Mike Leitold, a mission member, said the team would make public the results of its investigation of alleged human rights violations in the country next month and submit them to the Canadian government.

Leitold said the publication of the results of the fact-finding mission would coincide with the observance of International Human Rights Day Dec. 10.

The mission looked into cases of political killings in Abra, Ilocos Sur and Benguet as part of the Phil-Can Task Force on Human Rights that conducted probes in Central Luzon, Northern Luzon and Southern Tagalog recently.

Last week, the group was barred by the military in Quezon from pursuing an investigation of alleged human rights abuses in that Southern Tagalog province.

Leitold said the team wanted Canada to pressure the Philippine government to act and probe the killings.

"We want [our findings] to express [concern] [illegible] President Macapagal-Arroyo. [illegible] that this chilling pattern in the Philippines is real and needs to be investigated," Leitold told reporters here.

He said it was significant for the Canadian government to express its sentiments about this issue. Canada is one of the major foreign investors in the Philippines and is host to a large number of Filipino immigrants, he said.

He said the results of the mission in Abra and Ilocos Sur showed a clear pattern of human rights abuses committed against leftist activists and farmers who were tagged by the military as New People's Army members. Military officers have denied the charges.

The abuses ranged from threats, murder, forced disappearances, torture to warrantless [illegible], he said.

"We need a full investigation. The victims and their families should be given justice," he said.

Beverly Longid, vice chair of the Cordillera Human Rights Alliance, said the military could have been behind the murder and surveillance of and threats received by political activists in the Cordillera, Cagayan Valley and the Ilocos.

"We hold the Arroyo regime responsible for all these killings and other violations of people's rights ... It has declared a war of terror against the Left, including leaders and members of progressive legal organizations," she said.

On Monday, the militant Tongtongan Ti [illegible] said suspected military agents had been monitoring the movements of [illegible], coordinator of the party-list group Bayan Muna in Baguio and Benguet, and [illegible], Cordillera coordinator of Confederation for Unity, Recognition and Advancement of Government Employees. Desiree Caluza, Inquirer Northern Luzon past, I had shopped with her in Bangkok, New York and Paris. This time she took me to the outlets in Fendi and the Swarovski factory.

At a flea market in Milan we found the cheapest boots and bags in beautiful leather. Betty Ferni brought home dried tomatoes, Jun and Pinkie Magbanua bought shoes and coffee pot...

"The lesson of it all was ... we all had overweight bags in the end. I was charged by a beastly Italian woman €650 for my overweight. That's something like €780, or P52,000. I left that suitcase in Milan, to be sent by air cargo. It's still literally up in the air as of this writing.

The best shows were in Florence and Milan. The stage elements and the audience made the combination awesome, all the shows were full packed, except the one in London, where the venue was far from commercial transport.

"Kamustahan 2006," mounted by the Alcaraz's Star Events, certainly made a lot of Filipinos happy.
